Purpose: The purpose of the Workshop is to provide guidance to public health researchers on community participation in the planning, conduct, and application of research. History has demonstrated that the quality of medical and public health science is enhanced when it is planned and conducted in the social context of its work. This includes planning and conducting research that involves and impacts communities. This workshop will provide a unique opportunity to open dialogue among government, American Indian Tribes, labor, communities, and researchers. This dialogue is expected to lead to a proposed framework through which CDC promotes public health, advances democratic principles, establishes an ethical basis for community-based research, enhances scientific credibility, and provides mechanisms for building public trust while advancing the science of public health.

Matters to be Discussed: Agenda items will include presentations on ongoing projects by the National Center for Environmental Health (NCEH), the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health, the Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry, and the New Mexico Department of Public Health. Time will be set aside for public comments and discussions with Agency staff, followed by the workshop being divided into two breakout sessions: (1) Environmental Health Issues; and (2) Occupational Health Issues.

Agenda items are subject to change as priorities dictate.
